General Comments
Environmental changes	DEST/State Relations: The field of Indigenous Education is increasingly in the spotlight because of the funding tensions and accountabilities evident in State/Federal relations regarding the provision of services to Indigenous Australians. Minister Bishop has flagged that there will be increasing DEST focus on the provision of credible courses for Indigenous and non-Indigenous professional development, both award and non-award, that support improved academic achievement by Indigenous people. Government/Indigenous Community Relations: There is a much stronger consensus emerging between the federal government and traditional owner groups that at any other time that welfare reform must be supported and succeed to break the cycle of poverty and welfare reliance in rural and remote Indigenous communities. Education, along with health, is seen by both parties as the key to social and economic sustainability for these communities. There will be increasing spotlight on the competencies and capabilities of teachers to achieve academic success with Indigenous students and on the programs we offer to prepare students to work in and with Indigenous communities. Faculty/Indigenous Community Relations: The above strategy of focus on development of Partnerships with Traditional Owner communities reflect that it is Traditional Owner groups rather than 'Aborigines' per se that are the legal entity now being recognised as having sui generis rights. For education, this opens up a pathway for the agreement of protocols for the inclusion of Indigenous knowledge in the curriculum (as it is owned by communities who have the rights to that knowledge); the opportunity for the children of Traditional Owners to become teachers and Indigenous paraprofessionals within mainstream education; expanded opportunities for the faculty to offer an Indigenous sequence in the new program maps; extended opportunities for fieldwork placements in remote and rural Indigenous communities bit in Australia and overseas.
